GENERAL STATEMENT

The School of Law of the University of Alabama was first opened in 1845, under the charge of Honorable Benjamin F. Foster. Work in it continued for one year only, when it was closed on account of lack of students. No further action was taken in the matter until 1872, when the present school was organized through the efforts of Honorable Henderson M. Somerville, who was placed in charge of the course of instruction. The course of study at that time covered a period of one year only and no special academic training was required for admission. In 1897 the course of study was extended to two years. Since 1908 the requirements for admission to the school of Law have been the same as in the College of Arts and Sciences. It is planned to extend the law course to three years in the near future.

It is the purpose of the Law School to prepare its students to practice their profession and it does this by means of the practical instruction and training it gives them in general legal principles and the art of legal practice. While the basis of the instruction is the general principles of English and American jurisprudence, particular stress is placed upon the statutory changes and the judicial modifications that have been made to the common law in Alabama. This course is pursued in many of the subjects in the curriculum, but it is especially emphasized in Pleading, Evidence, Real Property and Domestic Relations. It is the aim of the law faculty to give such training and instruction as will fit young men for the active duties of the office and the courtroom, and, at the same time, to impress upon them, in the lecture rooms and in private, an exalted idea of the ethics of the profession, without which a knowledge of law is a danger to the individual and to the state.

The superior advantages to be derived from being educated in the state of the student's intended residence are too frequently overlooked, until learned in mature years, when too late. To no one does this truth apply with so much force as to the law student. The acquaintances formed and the friendships cemented by him during a University course pursued in his own state are capable of the most pleasant and profitable utilization.

ADVANTAGES OF LAW SCHOOL OVER LAW OFFICE

Undoubtedly the great progress in legal education in the United States during the last quarter of the century is shown as much by the increase in numbers and efficiency of the American law schools as by any other means. In 1910 there were 108 law schools and 15,000 students, while in 1880 there were but 43 law schools and 3,000 students. These figures show the confidence of the bench and bar in law schools as an agency in legal education, because at least eighty per cent of those seeking admission to the bar each year are law school graduates. Moreover, it is patent to all that systematic instruction by experienced instructors will result in a more thorough and a more speedy preparation for the bar than can come by "reading law" in a modern law office. The benefits of practical experience by a student in a law office are great, but they are immeasurably increased if the office experience is preceded by a thorough course in the general principles of the law. Each year, in all law schools, an increasing number of students are taking up the study of law as a preparation for a business career, on account of the practical benefits of a knowledge of the law and the discipline gained by its study. It is suggested that if, for any reason, the student is unable to take the full course of the law school, he will get more benefit by taking the first year of the course before entering the office, than by reversing the order.

MORGAN HALL

The Law School occupies the entire third floor of the new Morgan Hall. This gives it lecture rooms, a reading room, a library room, consultation rooms for students and offices for the dean and other members of the faculty. The building was erected in 1911 and was named in memory of the late lamented John Tyler Morgan. It is heated by hot water and lighted by electricity.

THE LAW LIBRARY

The law library occupies a large, well lighted, well ventilated and handsomely furnished room, which has on its walls fine oil portraits of Honorable Henderson M. Somerville, the founder of the present school, and Honorable Thomas W. Coleman, a former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama. It is hoped that portraits of all of the present and former members of this Court may be obtained for the library in the near future.

Law books are the working tools of the practicing lawyer. To teach the student how to use these tools, how to use the digests, encyclopaedias, and reports, is as much the proper work of a law school as to teach him the general principles of the law. All books in the library are accessible to all students during library hours, and their course is so arranged that they must become intimately acquainted with the library, the laboratory of the law school, in the performance of their daily work.

The Law School is fortunate in possessing a good working library of 4500 volumes, and has on its shelves the following books: Several copies of the Alabama State Reports, Codes, and Digests; the Lawyer's Reports Annotated, old and new series, with digests; the American Decisions, the American Reports and the American State Reports, with Digests; the English Ruling Cases; the United States Supreme Court Reports, Annotated Statutes and digests; the American Digest System; some of the English Reports and many of the standard text-books and works of reference.

ADMISSION

All applicants for admission to the Law School as candidates for a degree must satisfy the general entrance requirements of the University, namely: fourteen units. By a unit is meant the equivalent of five recitations a week for a full academic year of an accredited preparatory school. This admission may be obtained by a certificate from such preparatory school or by examination at the University. For further information, see general catalogue of the University, pages 45 to 51.

ADMISSION TO ADVANCED STANDING

Applicants who are qualified to enter the Law School as candidates for a degree and who have satisfactorily completed one year of resident work in a law school of good standing, will be given credit in this school for the subjects so completed, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated, upon presenting properly authenticated certificates of such work. No credit will be given in the subjects of Contracts, Common Law Pleading, Real Property and Evidence. Any person who intends to apply for advanced standing under the above rule should forward or present his credentials to the dean of the Law School at least one week before the opening of the particular session which he desires to attend.

A student who has been given credit, as above indicated, and fails in any examination he is required to take in the Law School, is liable to have all his credits cancelled by the faculty and be required to take all of such work in class.

ADMISSION OF SPECIAL STUDENTS

Applicants who are at least twenty years of age and who are unable to comply with the entrance requirements in their entirety,, may matriculate in the Law School and pursue such courses as the dean of the Law School may consider them able to take to advantage. No such applicant, however will be enrolled as a candidate for a degree, or allowed to take any final examinations, until he has satisfied all preliminary requirements for admission to the University.

ADVANTAGES OF LOCATION

The location of the University in Tuscaloosa, the county seat of Tuscaloosa County, affords the law students especial opportunities to observe the procedure of the courts. The United States District court holds at least two sessions each year at Tuscaloosa and the Tuscaloosa County Court, which has concurrent jurisdiction with the Circuit and Chancery Courts of the state, is in session during the entire school year. The Circuit and Chancery Courts hold two sessions each during the school year. The Municipal Court of Tuscaloosa and the Justice Courts of the city are open and in session constantly.

SPECIAL LECTURES

In addition to the regular lectures of the Law School, special lectures are given from time to time by prominent members of the bench and bar. Legal ethics and various phases of the practice are thus considered. During the year just closed, the students in the Law School have been addressed by the following members of the bench and bar of the state: Hon. Ormond Somerville, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, J. J. Mayfield, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Hon. Edward de Graffenreid, Associate Justice of the Appellate Court, Hon. W. I. Grubb, Judge of the United States District Court, and Hon. A. Latady, of the Birmingham Bar. A similar course of lectures will be arranged for the coming year.

PUBLIC SPEAKING

It is important that those who study law with a view of becoming advocates should give attention to the subject of public speaking. It is a mistake to suppose that excellency in public speaking is simply a gift of nature, and not the result of patient and persistent labor and study. Accordingly, arrangements have been made for a special course in public speaking to be given to the students in the Law School by Professor Frederick D. Losey, Professor of Rhetoric. While this course is optional, it has been largely attended each year, and the law students are earnestly advised to avail themselves of its advantages.

DEBATING SOCIETIES

The Kent Club and the H. M. Somerville Club are debating societies organized and maintained among the law students. Questions of general and special interest to the students as future members of the legal profession are here discussed. An opportunity is also afforded for the study of parliamentary law and drill in parliamentary practice. While the membership and work in these societies are limited to students in the Law School, the members of the faculty give all the assistance and encouragement to the work that is possible.

COMBINED COURSE IN ARTS AND LAW

Seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences, under a resolution recently adopted, may elect, as part of the requirements for graduation, courses from the first year's work in the School of Law, to an amount not exceeding six hours. A combined course of this character, supplemented by work in the Summer Law School, makes it possible for seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences to obtain the degree of LL. B. in the year following their graduation from the College of Arts and Sciences. This action is taken preliminary to the introduction of a three year course in law in the near future.

SUMMER SESSION

The Law School holds a regular summer session, covering a period of six weeks. The lectures are given by members of the law faculty. The same entrance requirements are in force as for the other sessions of the School. The work covered in the summer session is a part of the subjects taught in the first year of the regular course. It is especially designed :

First—To enable young men, who are qualified, to take examinations for admission to the senior law class.

Second—To afford an opportunity to young men to take a preliminary course in law with a view to familiarizing themselves with subjects taught in the first year of the regular law course, thereby lessening their work in the Law School during the first year and enabling them, if they desire, to take academic studies in connection with their law course.

Third—To prepare for the bar examination men of mature years, whose circumstances make it impossible for them to take the regular course.

UNIVERSITY PRIVILEGES

The advantages of the other departments of the University are open to such students in the College of Law as desire and are able to utilize them. Courses in Constitutional and Political History, International Law, Political Economy, Logic and Rhetoric are particularly recommended to law students. No extra charge is made for such courses.

THE COURSE OF STUDY

The course of study in the School of Law is a graded one and covers a period of two years of thirty-six weeks each, exclusive of vacations. The academic year is divided into two semesters, of eighteen weeks each. The following is a description of the different subjects in the course, the time given to each and the text-books used :

JUNIOR YEAR

INSURANCE—This course treats of the nature of the contract of insurance its consummation, form, parties, the doctrine of misrepresentation and concealment, and the powers of the insurer's agent in regard to the contract. Consideration is also given to the principles governing the loss of rights under the contract for breach of warranty and the circumstances constituting a waiver of the right of the insurer to claim a forfeiture or to estop him from setting up a breach of warranty in defence when sued on an insurance contract. The standard fire policy is taken up and studied minutely when the subject of fire insurance is considered. Text-book: Wambaugh's Cases on Insurance. Two hours a week. Professor Ward.

DAMAGES—General principles; different kinds of damages; pleading and practice; breach of contract for sale of goods, actions against carriers; death by wrongful act; wrongs effecting real property; damages in tort action; breach of marriage promise. Text-book: Sedgwick on damages. Two hours a week. Professor Ward.

BANKRUPTCY—This course is designed to give a careful study to the Federal Bankruptcy Act of 1898, and amendments thereto, and the cases construing the same. Practical instruction in the conduct of a proceeding in bankruptcy is also given. One hour a week. Professor Ward.

Owing to a readjustment of the curriculum of the Law School for the coming year, it has been necessary to give the Senior Class in the year 1912-1913 some of the courses that are regularly assigned to the work of the Junior year. This will necessitate some changes in the present Senior schedule for the year 1913-1914.

THE PRACTICE COURT

Thoroughly organized practice courts are regular features of the course of instruction in the second year. Weekly sessions of the court will be held under charge of some member of the faculty. The object of this course is to give the student practical instruction in pleading and practice at law and in equity, and experience in the preparation and trial of causes. The work is arranged as follows:

First—Cases arising upon prepared statements of fact are assigned to the senior students, upon which they are to determine what proceedings to bring and how to bring them. They are then to issue, serve and return the proper process and prepare the pleadings and bring the case to an issue. Each student must take part in one case at law and one in equity. A case is first heard on the sufficiency of the form and structure of the pleading, and, when these are approved, the issue is tried and decided, the students acting as attorneys on each side, drawing the order, judgment or decree they deem themselves entitled to.

Second—In the second class of cases in the practice court, actual controversies are arranged and assigned for trial as issues of fact. After determining what action to bring, the students assigned to the case are required to issue the proper process and prepare and file the necessary pleadings, subpoena the witnesses, select the jury, examine and cross-examine the witnesses and argue the case to the jury. Each student is required to participate in the trial of one civil or one criminal case.

EXAMINATIONS

The last week of each semester is set apart for examinations covering the work of the semester. These examinations are in writing and are rigid and searching, but are not necessarily final.

Students conditioned upon examination other than at the close of the second year, shall be allowed a second examination to remove such conditions, and, in the event of failure therein, must take the course over with the next succeeding class. Special examinations and re-examinations at the end of the second year cannot be given except by vote of the faculty and will be allowed only under special circumstances. If a student's unexcused absences in any subject in the course exceed ten per cent of the total number of hours scheduled for that subject, the privilege of examination in that subject will be denied. Excuses for absences must be made to the dean in writing.

A member of the Junior class will not be advanced to Senior standing until he has removed all entrance conditions, if any, and has satisfactorily passed examinations in subjects requiring at least three hours a week in his Junior year. Examinations for those conditioned in the work of the Junior year and for admission to the Senior class will be held on the third day next preceding the opening of the next college year.

PRIZES

MAYFIELD PRIZE

Hon. J. J. Mayfield, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, has provided an annual prize of one set of Mayfield's Digest, valued at $60.00, to be awarded each year by the law faculty to a student of the Senior and Junior class who shall offer the best thesis upon some subject assigned by the faculty.

OLIVER PRIZE

Dean W. B. Oliver has provided an annual prize of $25.00 to be awarded each year by the law faculty to a student of the Senior class, on such terms and conditions as may be determined by the law faculty each year.

AMERICAN LAW BOOK CO. PRIZE

The American Law Book Co. has generously offered a set of the student edition of the Encyclopædia of Pleading and Practice, to be awarded each year by the law faculty to a student of the Senior Class, on such terms and conditions as may be determined by the law faculty.

CERTIFICATE OF ATTENDANCE

Each student who has been in regular attendance in the Law School for at least one semester may, on application to the faculty, receive a certificate of such attendance, indicating the amount and quality of work done by him.

DEGREES

The degree of Bachelor of Laws, (LL. B.), is conferred upon those students who satisfactorily complete the course of study, as previously outlined. Students admitted to advanced standing, may, if they do satisfactorily the work as prescribed by the rules of the Law School, receive the degree after one year's residence. In do case, however, will the degree be granted unless the candidate is in actual residence during all of the Senior year.

ADMISSION TO THE BAR

A special statute authorizes the graduates of the Law School to be admitted without examination or other condition, on motion in the Supreme Court, to practice in all the courts of Alabama. Such graduates are also admitted, on motion, to practice in the United States District Circuit Courts in this state.

DISCIPLINE

Students in the Law School are subject to the same discipline as students in the other Colleges of the University. Rules are few, simple and reasonable. The honor system prevails and, so long as students do the work required and conduct themselves in a becoming manner, they are free to come and go at will. The aim is self-government.

EXPENSES

The expenses of law students for the full session of thirty-six weeks are as follows :

	Students boarding in dormi- tories	Students boarding out of dor- mitories	Students whose homes are in Tus- caloosa
Room rent, fuel, light, water and at- tendance	$36 00	$-----	$-----
Library	3 00	3 00	3 00
Incidental	3 00	3 00	3 00

Medical attention	6 00	6 00	(Opt.)
Tuition	75 00	75 00	75 00
	<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
Total	$126 00	$84 00	$78 00
Amount per term	42 00	28 00	26 00

The tuition fee for the summer law course is $40.00, payable in advance.

For the convenience of students, the session is divided into three fiscal terms of twelve weeks each, and one-third of these charges is payable at the beginning of each term. Those students whose homes are in Tuscaloosa are not required to pay the surgeon's fee, but may do so if they desire the services of the surgeon.

Students not rooming in the dormitories can secure table board in the University dining-room at $12.50 a month. Those who room in the dormitories and take meals elsewhere are charged $4.50 per scholastic month for room rent.
